The legal aspects of the dispute between Mexico and Texas irrigation districts, which had rights to Rio Grande water, are not settled even though the water was finally repaid. Several Texas irrigation districts asked an arbitration tribunal created under the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) to rule that Mexico’s actions caused them economic harm. In June 2007, the tribunal ruled that it had no jurisdiction in the matter. The districts now are asking a Canadian court to set aside the tribunal’s decision.
